RESTIGOUCHE, an extensive county in the north of New Brunswick, bordering on Baie des Chaleurs. The surface is extremely diversified with mountains and valleys and is intersected by numerous rivers. The soil is fertile and heavily timbered. Large quantities of timber are annually exported from Dalhousie, the chief town. Area, 2,092,595 acres. Pop. of co. (1901), 10,586.

RESTIGOUCHE (which means "the river which divides like the hand," in allusion to its separating at the head of tide into five principal streams or branches), a river of New Brunswick, forms the north boundary of the province on the north-west, separating it from the province of Quebec. From the head of tide to its extreme source near Lake Temiscouata, the distance is 200 miles, and the main river, with its tributaries, drains an area of about 5,000 square miles of fertile and well timbered country. The five leading branches vary from 50 to 70 miles in length, and are known by the novel names of Matapediac, or Musical River; Upsalquitch, or Blanket River; Wetomkegewick, or Large River; Mistouche, or Little River, and Waagan, or Knife River. The entrance to the Restigouche from the Baie des Chaleurs is 3 miles wide and 9 fathoms deep. The tide flows up it 24 miles, of which 18 are navigable for the largest ships. The principal towns on its banks are Dalhousie, at its mouth, and Campbellton, at the head of navigation. The scenery in its course is everywhere both grand and beautiful, but that portion is the most interesting where it forces its way through the mountain lands which give birth to the great streams of New Brunswick, and those of the United States emptying into the Atlantic Ocean. Here "the eagle, unmolested, builds its nest upon high cliffs; the bear and black cat secrete themselves in caves and rocky fissures; the moose and cariboo 'brouse' upon their favorite food; and the salmon, fearless and free, reflect the sunshine in the deepest and darkest pools." The Restigouche is one of the finest salmon rivers in the world. On the Upsalquitch, also, rare salmon-fishing may be enjoyed. Fish-breeding operations are carried on by the Government on the Restigouche, opposite the mouth of Matapediac River.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS, called also CHIPPEWAYAN MOUNTAINS, a chain in the central and west part of North America; commencing in New Mexico, in about 52° 30′ N. lat., near Fort Webster, it extends nearly north northwest, throughout the north portion of the continent and the Polar Ocean, terminating west of the mouth of the Mackenzie River, in lat. 69° N., lon. 135° W. This range, in connection with the Andes, of which it may be said to be a continuation, forms the longest, and, according to Humboldt, the most uniform chain of mountains on the globe. Somewhat more than half of the entire chain belongs to North America, the name, Rocky Mountains, being usually applied to that portion only which is comprised within the United States and the Dominion of Canada, although the exact limit of this mountain range towards the south can scarcely be said to be determined. The entire length of the chain, following the windings, may be stated in round numbers at 3,000 miles. The east boundary of the Rocky Mountains in lat. 38° N., is in 105° 20′ W. lon.; in lat. 40° N., 108° 30′ W. lon.; in lat. 63° N., 124° 40′ W. lon.; in lat. 68° N., 130° 30′ W. lon. Notwithstanding this general tending to the west, the continent widens so much more in the same direction that this chain, which, in South and Central America, and Mexico, is comparatively a coast range, is several hundred leagues inland in the United States and Canada. The highest known peaks within the United States are Fremont's, 13,570 feet, and Pike's Peak, 11,497 feet high; and Mount Brown and Mount Hooker, in Canada, near 53° N. lat., the former about 16,000 and the latter 15,690 feet above the sea level. Other notable elevations of the region are Mounts Murchison. Stepren, McDougall, Sir Donald, Mount Lyall, Mount Baker, besides numberless peaks occurring in the Sierra, Gold, Purcell, Selkirk and other ranges. We are very imperfectly acquainted with this system of mountains; the general altitude of the range, however, is supposed to vary from 10,000 to 14,000 feet; it is said that peaks have been measured of 18,000 feet in elevation. Probably no mountains of the same altitude can be so readily traversed as the Rocky Mountain chain, owing to the great breadth of its base and its gentle acclivity. Among the most remarkable of the numerous passes may be mentioned that leading from the head waters of the Athabasca to those of the Columbia between Mount Brown and Mount Hooker, and called the Athabasca Portage; it has a height of 7,300 feet, and has only been used by the traders of the Hudson Bay Company as the principal pass into the basin of Columbia. The following are the measurements of 8 other passes in the Dominion of Canada:

1. Red Stone Creek or Boundary Pass from Waterton River to the Kootenay, 6,030 feet above the sea.
2. British Kootenay Pass, by Ramsay River to the Kootenay. 5,960 feet.
3. Crow's Nest Pass, by Crow River to the Kootenay.
4. Kananaski Pass, from Fort Bow by Ramsay River to the Kootenay (with a short tunnel 4,600 feet). 5,985 feet.
5. Vermillion Pass, from the South Saskatchewan by Fort Bow (4,110 feet) to the Kootenay. 4,947 feet.
6. Kicking Horse Pass, by Bow River and Kicking Horse River to the Upper Columbia. 5,420 feet.
7. Howse Pass, from Deer River by Blueberry River to the Upper Columbia. 6,347 feet.
8. Tete Jaune or Yellowhead Pass, from the Athabaska to the Upper Fraser, 3,760 feet.

The principal pass on United States territory is the South Pass, in about lat. 42° 30 N., and lon. 109° 30′ W. Its elevation is about 7,500 feet above the sea. The Union Pacific Railroad crosses the Rocky Mountains near the sources of the Missouri and Columbia at an elevation of about 6,000 feet above the sea. Amid the valleys and forges of this stupendous system of mountains, some of the largest rivers of the globe have their birth. Of these, the Athabasca, Peace and Mackenzie find their outlet in the Polar Sea; the Saskatchewan in the Atlantic, through Hudson Bay; the Missouri and its tributaries find an exit in the Mississippi; while the Rio del Norte, the Colorado and the Columbia take opposite directions, the first through the valley of New Mexico to the Gulf of Mexico; the second through the deserts of Utah to the Gulf of California; while the last, from the north, bursting through the Cascade and coast ranges, rushes to join the mighty Pacific, bearing the only water that reaches that Ocean directly from this range. Of the geological structure of the Rocky Mountains little is as yet known. Volcanic rocks are known to exist in many places on the slopes or sides. According to the most recent reports there is, between the heads of Madison River and the upper waters of the Yellowstone a volcanic region of perhaps 100 square miles in extent. Hot springs are found not only in this region, but in various other places on the east and west declivities of the Rocky Mountain range. Near 42° 37′ N. lat., and 110° 45′ W. lon., there are a number of fountains, the waters of which effervesce with the carbonic acid that they contain. From this circumstance they have received the name of "Beer, or Soda Springs." The most remarkable of these throw up a jet d'eau about three feet in height, accompanied with a subterraneous noise, which, together with the rushing of the water resembles the sound of a steamboat in motion, whence it has been termed the "Steamboat Spring." Inexhaustible coal fields skirt the Rocky Mountains through twelve degrees of latitude, chiefly in British territory. The route of the Canadian Pacific Railway runs through this coal district and crosses the Rocky Mountains by the Yellow-head Pass. After leaving Calgary, the line goes by way of Canmore (altitude of station 4,355 feet), in view of the Three Sisters peaks, on to Banff, the seat of Hot Springs and of the Canadian National Park, a forest reservation 26 miles long by 10 miles in width. At Banff is the Canadian Pacific Hotel, close to the Bow River Falls, and in view of Mount Rundle and Sulphur Mountain. Entering the Kicking Horse Pass, the line reaches Stephen Station, in view of Mount Stephen, "the central spire of the Rockies." Soon we reach the summit or divide in the range and pass by way of Field and Donald to Glacier and "The Loop," in the vicinity of the Columbia and Kootenay Rivers, thence across the Selkirk range, through the Albert Canyon to the mining town of Revelstoke. From Sicamous, close by Shuswap Lake, the road runs alongside the Thompson River to Kamloops, thence on to North Bend, a divisional railway point, on the Fraser River. Following the canyon of the Fraser River, the scenery along which is described as "matchless, for 23 miles, we come to Yale, which is the head of navigation; on the Fraser River, 103 miles from Yale brings us to the Pacific Coast terminus—Vancouver, whence there is regular steamer service to Vancouver Island and the various ports along the Northern British Columbia coast, also to Japan, China and Australia. From Mission Junction, 42 miles east of Vancouver, a branch line extends 10 miles to Sumas, on the U. S. border, where connection is made with the United States railway lines for Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Ore; San Francisco, etc., and from Westminster Junc., 17 miles east of Vancouver, another branch line runs to Westminster, a distance of 9 miles.

SAGUENAY, a large river of Quebec, and one of the principal tributaries of the St. Lawrence, the estuary of which it enters 120 miles north-east of Quebec, in lat. 48° 6′ N., lon. 69° 38′ W., and into which it brings the surplus waters of Lake St. John. Total length, 100 miles. Its original Indian name was Chicoutimi, signifying "deep water," but the early Jesuit missionaries gave it the name it now bears. The Saguenay is remarkable for its wild and picturesque scenery. The first half of its course average half a mile in width and runs through a wilderness of pine and spruce covered hills; it abounds in waterfalls and is only navigable for canoes. A few miles below the most southern fall on the river is the village of Chicoutimi, where an extensive lumber business is transacted, and where the Hudson Bay Company have an important post. About 10 miles south of Chicoutimi there recedes from the Saguenay a beautiful expanse of water called Ha! Ha! Bay, at the head of which is another village. Between this bay and the mouth of the river its course exhibits some of the most sublime river scenery in the world, the banks varying in height from 500 feet to 1,500 feet, not only often perpendicular, but absolutely overhanging the dark, deep river below, as if to gaze at their own rugged features. The precipitancy continues below as well as above the water, which has been found as deep within five feet of the shore as in the middle. Near its mouth a line of 3,000 feet failed to find bottom; the depth in other parts varies from 100 to 1,000 feet. During the summer months the Saguenay is visited by thousands of tourists. It is navigable to Ha! Ha! Bay for vessels of the largest class. It receives the waters of many tributaries; some full of salmon. ST. HELEN'S ISLAND, a beautiful island in the St. Lawrence, opposite the east end of the City of Montreal, formerly the property of the Barons of Longueuil, but now of the Crown. It is about three-quarters of a mile long by one-third of a mile broad, and is clothed with fine trees. This island was granted by the King of France to the Sieur le Moine de Longueuil, on the 3rd of November, 1672. In May, 1771, the Baroness de Longueuil married David Alexander Grant and they lived in the family mansion, a splendid stone edifice, with outbuildings and a large garden attached, on the south bank of the Island, opposite Longueuil. In 1812, the British Government purchased St. Helen's Island, with Isle Ronde and Isle aux Fraises, for £15,000, and the Baronial residence was converted into officers' quarters. During the occupation of the Island by the Imperial authorities (over 50 years) several valuable buildings were erected and improvements of various kinds effected. It was the depot for valuable stores of every kind for the Montreal district. The grand magazine alone would accommodate nearly 6,000 barrels of powder, while expensive magazines and other buildings could be readily fitted up for 6,000 more. The ordnance store building next the river, opposite Molsons distillery, is of immense capacity, and in good condition, and will easily accommodate an equipment of six field batteries of artillery; the armory on the east side, built a short time before the departure of the military, and two stories high, is also of great capacity; the ground floor alone, in addition to accommodation for powder, will hold 40,000 stand of arms. The infantry barracks, with bomboproof kitchen and commissariat bakery will easily accommodate 7 or 8 officers and 100 men. There are still the remains of an old French redoubt at the south-west point opposite the city, and lines of entrenchments on the opposite extremity facing Hochelaga Bay. The only works of defence erected by the British Government appear to have been two block houses for the accommodation of about 400 men, principally for musketry and light guns on the top, and the construction of a ditch and a parapet in front of the soldiers' barracks opposite the city. The block houses were built entirely of wood, and, being of little value in modern warfare, have been allowed to fall into decay and become useless. The most elevated part of the Island, near the centre, is about 125 feet above the datum line of the river adopted by the Harbor Commissioners, and farther northward, in rear of the ordnance store building, the site of one of the old block houses is 100 feet above the river datum line. St. Helen's Island has been since its discovery a peculiar object of attention and admiration. In 1611 Samuel de Champlain contemplated settling upon it with his family, as described in the "Histoire de la Colonie Francaise en Canada," page 127, tome 1, as follows:

"Proche de la Place Royale (Montreal), et au fleuve St. Laurent, il rencontra une petite ile que sa situation et elevation semblent avoir fortifiee naturellement; et dans ses vues pour l'avenir du Canada, il jugea qu'on pourrait y batir une bonne et forte ville; mais ce qui est digne d'attention, il la nomma Sainte Helene, sans doute pour faire partager les avantages de son futur etablissement a Helene Bouillee, son epouse, qui, par sa dot, lui donnait le moyen d'en jeter les premiers fondements. Car il est a remarquer qu'il ne donne le nom de Ste. Helene a aucune des iles sans nombre qu'il rencontra au-desssous et dessus de Quebec, sinon a celle qui etait a cote de la Place Royale, ou il avait resolu de s'etablir."

It will thus be seen from the above extract the opinion formed by Samuel de Champlain of the natural features of this Island as a place of security and defence, and there is every reason to believe that the early Jesuit missionaries sought refuge here from the ferocious attacks of the Iroquois, who exceeded all other tribes of the Aborigines in savage and unrelenting barbarities in their treatment of European settlers, and the Hurons and other tribes disposed to be friendly to the stranger. It was also a depot for provisions, arms and stores, while settlements were forming on the mainland. St. Helen's Island is considered of great importance by military men as a defence of the commercial metropolis of the Dominion. This beautiful island is the property of the Dominion Government, and is in charge of the Corporation of Montreal, who have converted it into a magnificent park, and are negotiating with the government for its purchase for the sum of $200,000. In the summer months it is the daily resort of thousands.

ST. JOHN, a maritime county of New Brunswick, bordering on the Bay of Fundy, and intersected by the River St. John, which, at its mouth, forms one of the finest harbors on the coast. It is also drained by the Kennebaccasis and other rivers. The surface is agreeably diversified with hills and valleys. The soil is fertile and agriculture has made some advances; the chief industry of the inhabitants, however, is directed to commerce, shipbuilding and fisheries. Area 394,163 acres. Capital, St. John. Pop. of county and city (1901), 51,759.

ST. JOHN, a lake in Temiscouata co., Que.

ST. JOHN, a lake in North Ontario co., Ont., abounding with pickerel, maskinonge and bass.

ST. JOHN, a lake lying to the north-east of Lake Couchiching, in Muskoka dist., Ont.

ST. JOHN, a river of Quebec, joins the St. Lawrence with the L'Assomption River, north of the Island of Montreal, after a course of about 20 miles.

ST. JOHN (called by the Indians "Pequagomi," which means Flat Lake), a lake of Chicoutimi co., Quebec, between the parallels of 48° 27′ and 48° 51′ N. latitude, and the meridians of 71° 35′ and 72° 10′ W. longitude, about 120 miles north of Quebec. Its general shape is circular, and its circumference about 100 miles. It lies in an immense valley, and is the reservoir into which numerous large rivers and streams empty themselves, many of which rise in the highlands that separate the Ungava dist. and Northern Que. from Quebec proper. The principal of these rivers are the Mistassini, Peribonca and Kocuatien on the north, the Ashuapmouchouan and Ouiatchouanish on the west, the Ouiatchouan on the south-west, and the Metabetchouan, Kushbahiganish and Belle Riviere on the south. By means of some of these rivers, and their lakes and tributaries, communication from Lake St. John may be had through the Batiscan or St. Maurice with the St. Lawrence and through the Gatineau with the Ottawa. This great lake has its oulet into the Saguenay by the Grande and Petite Decharge, which lie on its east side. Its shores abound with inexhaustible quarries of limestone and extensive beds of fine marl. The lake contains a number of beautiful islands, and abounds with a variety of fish, including the celebrated "ouananiche." Area, 224,000 acres.

ST. JOHN, a river of Quebec, joins the estuary of the St. Lawrence at Mingan, opposite the Island of Anticosti, after a south course of 60 miles. It is an admirable salmon stream. The coast between the mouth of the St. John and the Bay of Seven Islands contains an abundance of black magnetic oxide of iron.

ST. JOHN, a city and seaport of New Brunswick, the commercial metropolis of the Province, and capital of St. John co., is picturesquely situated at the mouth of a river of its own name, on a rocky peninsula projecting into the harbor, 190 miles north-west of Halifax, via Annapolis, or 276 miles via Intercolonial Railway, and 761 miles south-east of Montreal. Lat. 45° 14′ 6″ N., lon. 66° 3′ 30″ W. (Partridge Island light).

The city is regularly laid out and well built. It stands on a declivity, and when approached from the sea has an imposing appearance. The whole of the elevated portion of the city consists of solid rock, which, for the purpose of forming tolerable streets, has had in some places to be excavated to a depth of 30 and 40 feet.

The city was almost completely destroyed by fire in 1876, but was rebuilt in a short time in a more handsome manner. Many of the old landmarks have passed away, but in their place have arisen buildings in which the best architectural skill has been displayed.

These buildings are chiefly of brick and stone, and many of the public edifices have an elegant appearance. The principal ones are St. Mary's Cathedral (Roman Catholic), Trinity Church, Lunatic Asylum, City Hospital, Court House and Gaol and Skating Rink.

There are 25 chief places of worship in St. John, the denominational census of 1901 being as follows: Church of England, 9,258; Roman Catholic, 11,977; Presbyterian, 4,365; Wesleyan Methodist, 5,655; Baptist, 7,460; Congregationalists, 215 and Jews, 174.

The educational institutions comprise a grammar school, several primary schools, and a number of public and private schools.

St. John has a number of religious and charitable societies, 1 free public library, 1 bank (of New Brunswick) with 3 branches and 6 branch banks (B. N. A., Montreal, Nova Scotia, Union of Halifax, Royal and Commerce), 1 savings bank, an efficient fire brigade, fire alarm telegraph 5 daily and several weekly newspapers, and a number of first-class hotels.

The thriving suburb of Carleton, on the opposite side of the harbor, is included within the city corporation.

The harbor of St. John is capacious, safe and never obstructed by ice, which makes it a-year-round port. Its entrance ,about 2 miles south of the city, is protected by Partridge Island, on which are a quarantine hospital and a lighthouse, the lantern 166 feet above the level of the sea. The passage west of the island has in it 10 feet of water, that to the east 16 feet, and abreast of the city there are from 8 to 22 fathoms;. both sides of the entrance are composed of sharp rocks, which become dry at low water. About ¾ of a mile north of the lighthouse is a vertical beacon, fixed on the edge of a rocky ledge which forms the west side of the channel and has a deep water close to it. On the east side of the channel, below the town, a breakwater has been constructed to intercept the violence of the waves, occasioned by southerly gales. The entrance of the River St. John into the harbor, about 1½ miles above the city, is through a rocky gorge, 90 yards wide and 400 yards long, occasioning very remarkable falls. The ordinary rise of the tide in the harbor is 21 feet; at the vernal equinox it rises 25 feet. At low water, the waters of the river are about 12 feet higher than those of the harbor, at high water the waters of the harbor are 5 feet higher than those of the river, hence the phenomena of a fall outwards and inwards at every tide. Above the falls the tide seldom rises more than 4 feet. When the waters of the harbor are on a level vessels can pass the falls, and this can be effected only during a period of 15 or 20 minutes at each ebb and flow of the tide. At times of great freshets, occasioned by the sudden melting of the snow, the tides do not rise to the level of the river, and consequently it is not possible for vessels to ascend the fall. The depth of the fall is about 17 feet. Spanning the rocky gorge about 100 feet above low water, is a magnificent suspension bridge 640 feet in length. The city's situation at the mouth of the St. John River (450 miles in length) gives its advantages in prosecuting the vast lumber trade of the Province; while it is close to extensive deposits of coal and limestone.

St. John is the entrepot of a wide extent of country, abounding in agricultural resources, minerals and valuable timber. Its admirable situation at the mouth of one of the largest rivers in North America, with a harbor open all the year round, with regular steam communication with all the main ports of Nova Scotia, and the northern portion of the United States, with first-class railways running from it in every direction with extensive maritime and manufacturing interests, ensures the certainty of its becoming a city of the greatest commercial importance.

St. John has manufactories of iron castings, steam engines, machinery, edge tools, nails, cotton and woollen goods, boots and shoes, leather, wooden ware, soap and candles, carriages, locomotives, agricultural implements, lumber, paper, sugar boxes. It has also cotton mills, rolling mills, foundries, engine and boiler works, wood working factories, saw mills, pulp mills, nail factories, edge tool works, brass works and factories for making brushes and brooms, paper boxes, cigars, confectionery and biscuits, for blending and packing teas; mills for grinding coffee and spice, pork packing houses, and minor industries of various kinds.

Between 600 and 900 men are yearly engaged in the fisheries in the harbor of St. John. Salmon, shad, herrings, alewives, halibut and haddock are taken in large quantities.

The streets of St. John are lighted with electricity, and the city is well supplied with water from a lake 4 miles in rear of the city.

The railway system of New Brunswick centres at St. John. The Intercolonial connects the city with Nova Scotia and Quebec and Ontario; the Canadian Pacific connects it with the United States, and cities and towns in counties of Queens, Charlotte, York, Carleton and Victoria and the N. B. Southern with St. George, St. Andrews and St. Stephen. It will also be one of the Atlantic termini of the Grand Trunk Pacific RR. It has moreover steamship, as well as railway, communication with Portland and Boston, as well as with the British Islands, Europe, the West Indies, and in winter with South Africa. It is the chief depot for the fish curing and packing houses engaged in the Bay of Fundy fish trade.

Although settlements have been made in Acadia for many years, no mention is made of St. John until 1604, when the French explorer, Champlain, pilot of an expedition commanded by M. de Monts, after coasting along the shores of Nova Scotia, crossed the Bay of Fundy, and discovered the magnificent river, which he named St. John. At that time it was called by the Aborigines. Ouangondy. No settlement was made until 1635, when a French nobleman named Charles St. Etienne, Lord of Latour, commenced the erection of a pallisade fort opposite Navy Island, in the harbor of St. John. De Latour, having been appointed Lieutenant General, lived here for a long time with a large number of retainers and soldiers, and traded in furs with the Indians. But, having fallen into disfavor with the French King, was ordered to surrender his fort and commission; this he refused to do and an expedition under the command of one, D'Aulnay Charnisay, was sent out in 1643 to eject him. D'Aulnay blockaded the fort, but Latour, having got assistance of men and ships from Governor Winthrop, of Boston, drove his fleet back to Port Royal (now Annapolis, N.S.), where a number of his vessels were driven ashore and destroyed. Again, in 1645, D'Aulnay attacked the fort, and Latour, being absent with a number of his men, his lady took command, and defended it with so much skill and perseverance that the fleet was compelled to withdraw. Having received reinforcements, D'Aulnay shortly afterwards returned, and again attacked the fort by land. After three days spent in several unsuccessful attacks, a Swiss sentry, who had been bribed, betrayed the garrison, and allowed the enemies to scale the walls. Madame Latour personally headed her little band of fifty men, and heroically attacked the invaders; but, seeing how hopeless was success, she consented to terms of peace, afforded by D'Aulnay, if she would surrender the fort. He, immediately upon getting possession, disregarded all the conditions agreed to, hanged the whole garrison, and compelled this noble woman, with a rope around her neck, to witness the execution; she, a few days afterwards died of a broken heart. In 1650, Latour returned to St. John, and received from the widow of D'Aulnay, who had died in the meantime, the possession of his old fort. In 1653 they were married, and he once more held peaceable control of his former lands as well as those of his deceased rival. In 1654, an expedition was sent by Oliver Cromwell from England, which captured Acadia from the French, and Latour was once more deprived of his property and possession. In 1657 Acadia was ceded to France by the treaty of Breda, but no settlement of importance was made until the year 1749, when a fort was built at the mouth of the Nerepis River, about 10 miles from the City of St. John. In 1745, the French were again driven out by the English; and in 1758, a garrison was established at St. John, under the command of Colonel Moncton. In 1764, the first English settlers came to New Brunswick, but no permanent settlement was made until 1783, when the Loyalists arrived and founded the present City of St. John. It was created a town by Royal Charter in 1785.

St. John (city and county) returns 3 members to the House of Commons and 6 to the Provincial Legislature. Pop. of city and co., in 1891, 49,574; in 1901, 51,759. Pop. of the city today (1907), about 50,000.

ST. JOHN RIVER (Indian name "Looshtook," signifying "the Long River"), the principal river of New Brunswick, rises under the name of the South West Branch, at the Metgermette Portage, in the highlands which separate Maine from the Quebec Province, near the sources of the Connecticut. Another and Canadian source of the St. John River is by way of the Madawaska River, which joins it in its issue from Lake Temiscouata in the Province of Quebec. It flows due north-east to the junction of the St. Francis (lat. 47° 10′ N., lon. 68° 54′ W.), a distance of about 150 miles, of which course about 100 miles, commencing at the influx of the North West branch, is known as the Wallastook River. Below the entrance of the St. Francis, the St. John flows in an irregular east-south-east course to the Grand Falls (lat. 47° 5′ N., lon. 67° 45′ W.), where the river has a perpendicular descent of 70 or 80 feet, abounding in picturesque scenery; thence its direction is nearly south, to about lat. 46° N., where it bends suddenly east, and flows in this general direction for about 100 miles to the entrance of the outlet to Grand Lake, below which the river flows in a broad channel due south-south-east. Its entire length is estimated at 450 miles. To the Grand Falls, 225 miles from the sea, its course is wholly within the Province of New Brunswick. From a point about 3 miles above the falls, where the east boundary of Maine intersects the St. John, to the entrance of the St. Francis, a distance of 75 miles, the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick is found in the middle channel or deepest water of the river. From the mouth of the St. Francis to about lat. 46° 25′ N., lon. 70° 4′ W., a distance of 112 miles, the river has its course wholly in Maine; but from the point last mentioned to the Monument at the source of the river on the Metgermette Portage, a distance of about 38 miles, the right bank only is in the Province of Quebec. The principal affluents of the St. John are the Oromocto, Aroostook and Alagash, from the west, and the Kennebaccasis, Washademoak, Salmon, Naskwaak, Tobique, Madawaska and St. Francis, from the east. Vessels of 120 tons ascend the St. John to Fredericton, 80 miles from the Bay of Fundy; small steamers ply to Woodstock, 75 miles farther up, and occasionally make trips to the Grand Falls. Above the Grand Falls, the St. John has been navigated by a steamer 40 miles to the mouth of the River Madawaska, and from this point boats and canoes ascend almost to its sources. It is estimated that the St. John and its tributaries afford 1,300 miles of navigable waters. The area drained is computed at 17,000,000 acres, of which 9,000,000 are in New Brunswick, 2,000,000 in Quebec, and 6,000,000 in Maine. A great portion of this is occupied by dense forests of pine, hackmatack and other timber, of which vast quantities are annually rafted down the river. The valley of the St. John is remarkable for its fertility as well as for its picturesque beauty.

ST. JOHN'S, a river of Gaspe co., Que., empties into Gaspe Bay at a place known as the Barachois de Malbaie, after a course of about 70 miles. Boats can ascend it a short distance while canoes can ascend to its source. It furnishes splendid salmon and sea trout angling.

ST. JOHN'S a river in Saguenay co., Que., falls into the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Schooners of 80 and 90 tons can enter its mouth, but it is not navigable for any great distance. It is a fine salmon and trout stream.

ST. JOHN'S, the most eastern seaport and city, of North America, capital of Newfoundland, near the extremity of the easternmost of the numerous peninsulas which project from the east portion of the island, 1665 miles west by south of Galway, Ireland, this being the shortest distance between any two seaports of Europe and America, 1,076 miles north-east of Montreal. Lat. 47° 33′ 6″ W., lon. 52° 3′ W.

The harbor is an excellent one. It is enclosed by two mountains, between the east points of which is the entrance, called the "Narrows," only 95 fathoms wide in its narrowest part and 100 fathoms long. This entrance was at one time defended by several batteries and fortifications, and could be made impregnable, but those have long since gone to ruin. It has 12 fathoms of water in mid channel, but only one vessel can pass at a time. Within there is ample space for shipping in good anchorage with perfect shelter. There are no perceptible tides. A light on Cape Spear (distant 3 miles from the harbor) is visible 30 miles at sea; there is also a harbor light. In foggy weather a 32 pounder gun is fired every half hour, and a compressed air trumpet is sounded continuously for seven seconds in every minute, enabling vessels to enter the "Narrows" at all times, the water being deep and the shore bold.

The town is situated on an acclivity, and since the last fire several large buildings have disappeared, the streets have been straightened and widened, and it is now a modern city, about 1½ miles in length, rather irregularly built, but containing many good shops and stores, mostly of stone. The houses in this part of the town are small and mostly of brick, but in the upper part they are of wood, and are very awkwardly disposed. St. John's, however, has, upon the whole, been greatly improved since the great fires of 1846, and of some years ago, both as regards the style of buildings and the width and regularity of the streets. The town is lighted with gas and is well supplied with water brought at an expense of $420,000 from a large lake 4 miles from the town.

The public buildings, exclusive of the churches, are the Government House, a large plain structure, erected at a cost of $240,000 the House of Assembly, hospital, penitentiary, poor house and banks.

There are 13 places of worship, 4 Episcopal, 9,566 adherents; 3 Roman Catholic, 26,576 adherents; 1 Established Church of Scotland 1,062 adherents; 4 Wesleyan, 6,737 adherents; and 1 Congregational, 412 adherents. St. John's Church is a fine cathedral, erected for the Roman Catholics at a cost of $800,000. The Episcopal cathedral, from designs by the late Sir Gilbert Scott, was partially destroyed by fire, but being rebuilt, is one of the noblest specimens of Gothic architecture in British America. The cost of the sacred edifice was about $250,000.

The educational institutions of St. John's comprise, in addition to elementary schools, academies, in connection with the Church of England, the Wesleyan Church and the Roman Catholic Church.

There are three colleges in connection with the different religious denominations.

There are several religious and benevolent societies, a literary institute, a reading room, library and museum attached; an agricultural society, 2 foundries, 3 breweries, 2 tanneries, 1 block factory, 1 boot and shoe factory, 3 cabinet factories, 1 saw mill, 3 biscuit factories, each using 20,000 barrels of flour annually, several oil refineries, a large factory occupied for making nets, and also a large rope walk employing many hands. The Athenæum, which cost $70,000, is a fine building, in which are located the reading room and library above referred to, and some of the Government departments. It has besides a spacious and beautiful hall for public entertainments. The banks are 2 in number (the Bank of Montreal and Bank of Nova Scotia).

The trade of St. John's consists chiefly in supplying fishermen with clothing, provisions, and fishing and hunting gear. During the spring season the harbor is thronged with merchant vessels from almost all parts of the world with provisions and articles required in the fishery.

Rails of narrow guage connect St. John with Harbor Grace, under Government control, with a branch to Placentia. A railway from Whitbourne Junction to Hall's Bay 400 miles, is now traversing the inland portion of the Island, which opens up a country rich in lumber and minerals.

The British Government was established at St. John's as early as 1582 by the gallant Sir Humphrey Gilbert. The French subsequently took possession, but after a series of troubles the Island in 1762 again fell into the hands of the British, and has since remained in their possession. Pop. (1891), 34,142; (1901), 30,604.

ST. JOHNS, a delightfully situated town of Quebec "chef-lieu" of the district of Iberville, on the Richelieu River, 27 miles from Montreal. It contains, besides the district and county buildings, churches for the Episcopalians, Methodists and Roman Catholics, the head office of the St. Johns Bank, branches of La Banque National, the Eastern Townships, and the Merchants Bank of Canada, 12 hotels and about 100 stores. The works of the Corticelli Silk Co., Standard Drain Pipe Co., The Singer Manufacturing Co., Dominion Sanitary Pottery Co., Molleur's straw hat factory and Campbell & Purvis' pottery have their factories and offices here, and there are also several other industries. The town is lighted with electricity and has an admirable system of water works. No. 3 Company Royal Regiment Canadian Infantry is stationed here. Three weekly newspapers are published: "The News" (having four distinct editions) in English, and "Le Franco-Canadien" and "Le Canada Francais," in French. Four railways enter St. Johns, the G.T.R. between Montreal and Rouses Point, the C.P.R. between Montreal and Boston, the C.V.R. and the Delaware & Hudson. St. Johns has a large trade in lumber, grain and country produce. It is connected with Iberville on the opposite side of the Richelieu by a fine bridge. Pop. (1901), 4,030; (1907) 6,410.

ST. JOHNS, a county, including Iberville, in the south-west part of Quebec, bordering on the Richelieu River, comprises an area of 224,104 acres. It is interested by the G.T.R., C.V.R. and C.P.R. Capital, St. Johns. Pop. (1901), 19,536.

ST. JOHN'S ISLAND, a settlement in the dist. of St. Barbe, Nfld. Pop. (1901), 12.

ST. JOHN'S RIVER, a picturesque river of Ontario, in Muskoka dist., noted for its beautiful cascades.

ST. JOHNS WEST, a post settlement in Welland co., Ont. Port Robinson is the nearest station. Pop., 200.

ST. JONES' WITHIN, a settlement in the dist. of Trinity, Nfld. Pop. (1901), 83.

ST. JONES' WITHOUT, a settlement in the dist. of Trinity, Nfld. Pop. (1901), 76.

ST. LAWRENCE, one of the largest rivers in North America, issues from Lake Ontario in about 44° 10′ N. lat., and 76° 30′ W. lon., and flowing in a north-east direction, forming, in a part of its course, the boundary between New York and Ontario and Quebec, falls into the Gulf of St. Lawrence by a broad estuary, in about 49° 30′ N. lat., and 64° W. lon. Viewing this river in connection with the great western lakes, of which it forms the outlet, it may be said to rise at the sources of the St. Louis, which flows into Lake Superior. It has received different names in different parts of its course; between Lakes Superior and Huron, it is called the St. Mary; between Lakes Huron and Erie, the St. Clair and Detroit; between Lake Ontario, the Niagara; between Lake Ontario and the sea, it takes the name of St. Lawrence. Its whole length, including the chain of lakes, is estimated at 2,384 miles to Duluth. The distance from Lake Ontario to the Gulf of St. Lawrence is about 750 miles. It is navigable for ships of the line to Quebec, and for vessels drawing 27½ feet, the artificial channel being 17½ miles long through Lake St. Peter to Montreal. Between Montreal and Lake Ontario, the navigation is much impeded by rapids, the most important of which are the Cedar, Cascades, Long Sault and Lachine Rapids, the latter 9 miles above Montreal. There are in all 30 miles of rapids. The total elevation between tide water and Lake Ontario is 240 feet. This is overcome by the Williamsburg, Cornwall, Beauharnois and Lachine Canals. The St. Lawrence canals were deepened for paddle steamers, but from the magnitude of the rapids and their regular inclination the aid of the locks is not required in descending the river. From Lake Ontario to Lake Erie an elevation of 326¾ feet is overcome by the Welland Canal, 26¾ miles in length, with 26 cutstone locks, 270 feet long by 45 feet wide and a depth of 14 feet. Between Lakes Huron and Superior, 602¾ feet above the sea, the "Soo" Canal, now completed, terminates a canal system on the St. Lawrence 70½ miles long, with a total lift of 533½ feet, and a depth in the shallowest of 9 feet. The system is being deepened to 14 feet throughout, with locks 270 x 45 feet. The cost of the canals, up to 1903, has been $85,342,377 or, including expenditure, from income, on renewals, repairs, and the maintenance of the staff, $104,321,136. Of this total, over $20,000,000 was expended before Confederation; while $4,173,921 was supplied by the Imperial Government, and about 16½ millions by the Provincial Governments interested. Since Confederation, the total revenue from canals amounts to $13,247,970, or a yearly average of $367,999.

By means of the Richelieu River and Chambly Canal, large vessels pass from the St. Lawrence to Lake Champlain, which communicates through the Champlain Canal with the navigable waters of the Hudson, the route to New York from Montreal being 457 miles long. The principal affluents of the St. Lawrence are the Ottawa, 1,000 miles long, forming the boundary between Ontario and Quebec, the St. Maurice, Batiscan, and Saguenay, from 200 to 400 miles, and the Richelieu. The breadth of the St. Lawrence is very unequal, varying from less than a mile to 3 or 4 miles, and, towards the Gulf, to 60 miles. Across its mouth, from Cap Chatte to Pointe de Monts, the distance is about 40 miles. This stream contains many islands; in an expansion of the river near its egress from Lake Ontario there is a multitudinous group called the "Thousand Islands," presenting to the traveller an endless variety of charming scenery. This portion of the river is sometimes called the "Lake of the Thousand Islands" (Lac des Miles Isles). The great Victoria bridge, erected by the G.T.R. at a cost of about $7,000,0000, spans the river at Montreal, while there is a bridge at Coteau and a very fine one at Lachine. The St. Lawrence with its tributaries, drains an area estimated at 335,515 square miles, of which 90,000 are covered with the waters of the five great lakes.

ST. MARY'S STRAIT, or SAULT STE. MARIE, separates Ontario from the upper peninsula of Michigan, and connects Lake Superior with Lake Huron. It commences at the south-east extremity of the former lake, and after a general south-east course of 63 miles enters Lake Huron by three channels. At some places it spreads out into lakes; at others rushes through narrow rapids, or winds around beautiful islands. Its entire length is navigable by vessels drawing 8 feet of water up to within 1 mile of Lake Superior. At this point the natural limit of steamboat navigation is arrested by the "Sault" (Soo), having a descent of 22 feet within less than a mile. To overcome this impediment and give uninterrupted water communication between the Great Lakes a canal was cut by the United States in 1855. It was about a mile long, with two massive stone locks, each 250 feet long. The canal was 70 feet wide at the top and 61 feet at the bottom, and the depth of the water was 12 feet. The main body of the canal is excavated through rock.

The canal was enlarged, the lock to 515 by 80 feet and again enlarged to 800 by 100 by 21 feet deep. Canada has also built a lock 900 by 60 by 20¾ feet deep, the Canadian canal being 2-3 of a mile long and 152 feet wide, with a depth sufficient to pass vessels drawing 20 feet. The Sault Ste. Marie canal passes more traffic than the Suez Canal, in volume though not in value.

SASKATCHEWAN, PROVINCE OF, organized September 1, 1905, out of the territorial districts in the Northwest, west of Manitoba Province and the district of Keewatin and east of the new Province of Alberta, of Assiniboia, Saskatchewan and part of Athabaska. Its area is 250,650 sq. miles, of which 8,318 sq. miles are water. From north to south, namely from lat. 60° N. (the foot of Mackenzie district) to 49° N. (the international boundary line), the Province has a length of 760 miles; while its breadth varies from 277 to 393 miles; the population, in 1901, was 91,460; to-day (1906), it is close upon 200,000. The Province is governed to-day, under the provisions of the British North America Act of 1867, and under a Lieut.-Governor, by an Executive Council and a Legislative Assembly, the latter consisting of 25 members. It is represented in the Canadian Senate by 4, and in the House of Commons by 10 members. As the Province has no debt, and the Crown lands passing to the Federal Government, an annual subsidy of $50,000 is to be paid by the Dominion for the support of the local government and legislature, together with 80c per head on an estimated population of 250,000 (to be increased as the latter increases), and an annual sum of $405,375, the equivalent of interest at the rate of 5 p.c. on $8,107,500, the sum which, by the terms of the Confederation Act, it would be entitled to enter the Union free of debt, and on the plane of the other Provinces of Canada. The additional sum, annually for 5 years, of $93,750, is to be paid the Province for the construction of necessary public buildings. The electoral divisions (25 in number) of the Province are as follows: Souris, Cannington, Moosomin, Whitewood, Grenfell, Wolseley, Saltcoats, Yorkton, South Qu'Appelle, North Qu'Appelle, South Regina, Regina City (the capital), Lumsden, Moosejaw, Mcosejaw City, Maple Creek, Humboldt, Kinistino, Prince Albert, Prince Albert City, Batoche, Saskatoon, Rosthern, Redberry and Battleford. Late educational statistics assign to the two new Provinces (Alberta and Saskatchewan) 998 schools, with 1,152 teachers and 33,191 pupils, the annual expenditure for education in the two named Provinces being $1,066,602. As provision for the maintenance of these schools, the Dominion Parliament has set apart sections 11 and 29 in every township as an endowment. These school lands are subject to sale, and are meanwhile placed under the direction of the provincial Minister of the Interior. To assist agricultural development, the Federal Government maintains within the Province (at Indian Head) an Experimental and model farm. In south western Saskatchewan, ranching is being rapidly developed, as it is in the Province of Alberta; but agriculture may be said to be the paramount industry in the Province of Saskatchewan; wheat growing is the chief interest of the farmers, the yield being large and of the finest quality. The Province is well watered, both by lakes and streams; the chief rivers are the North and South Saskatchewan and their tributaries, besides the Souris, Rat, Carrot, Sturgeon, Battle, Vermilion, Beaver, Churchill, and other streams and creeks. It is traversed in various directions by the C. P.R. and its branch lines, as well as by the Canadian Northern RR.

The Province forms, with Manitoba and Alberta, a vast part of the great wheat belt, while mixed farming is very general, and in its south-western section ranching largely prevails. In soil, topography, climate, rainfall and productive adaptabilities, the Province much resembles Manitoba. These conditions are specially favourable to the growth of the hard, flinty wheat so much prized by millers, and commanding consequently a high price in competition with inferior qualities. It is characterized by absence of rust and the ravages of insects; while it is otherwise favored, during the period of growth and maturity, by fine climatic conditions, including much sunshine. Besides the vast stretches of open prairie, the Province has in its northern sections considerable forest growth, while it is abundantly watered. Ranching, as we have said, is largely engaged in, vast herds of cattle, horses, sheep and swine being annually reared on the rich grasses of the prairie and profitably exported. Statistics, recently published, indicate the gratifying development of this live stock trade in this and the adjoining Province of Alberta. Here are the census figures showing the growth of live stock, as well as population of the two neighboring provinces (Saskatchewan and Alberta), between the years 1901 and 1906.

Population	91,279	257,673
Horses	83,461	240,566
Horned Cattle	217,053	472,854
Sheep	73,097	121,290
Swine	27,753	123,916

The profits to the stockmen from the raising and sale of these large herds of live stock, reared on the rich, boundless pastures of the prairie region, are as phenomenal as they are gratifying. Not less striking is the monetary yield from the sales of the vast grain and root crops produced in the region. The growth of the Province may also be seen in the rise and development of the many towns and settlements, and the general prosperity which marks them. Besides the capital of the Province, Regina (which is also the seat of the Provincial Government), the following towns and their districts are notably progressive: Moose Jaw, Swift Current, Maple Creek, Rosthern, Humboldt, Saskatoon, Osler, Duck Lake, Prince Albert, Battleford, Batoche, Moosomin, Lumsden, Qu'Appelle, etc. Most of these towns are on the line of the C.P.R. and its branches, or on that of the Can. Northern RR.

SASKATCHEWAN, a river of the North West Territories, takes its rise in the Rocky Mountains, in a small lake near Mount Forbes, in about lat. 51° 50′ N. Its sources are in Alberta dist., while its northern branch runs through Saskatchewan and its southern branch through Assiniboia districts. Winding amongst the mountain spurs near its source, it follows a north-east direction to Pointe aux Pins, thence it runs north north-east to the foot of Big Horn Hill, whence, having received the streamlet of that name, it hastens eastward to Mountain House. From this point to Fort Edmonton its general direction is north-east; it continues in the same direction till it crosses the 54th parallel of latitude, along which it runs and then turns southward towards Fort Pitt, and thus, between the latter and Fort Edmonton, describes a large and almost regular curve. From Fort Pitt the river continues its south-east course to the Elbow, whence it turns suddenly towards the north-east, first reaching Carlton House and thence Cumberland House. From the latter point its general course is south-east, although its great winding sometimes carries it towards the north and sometimes towards the south. This great river divides into many branches that flow capriciously through the vast plain which they cut in various, and frequently quite opposite, directions. Clearwater River joins it near Mountain House, and 75 miles farther down it receives Brazeau River, called also North Branch. From its source to Mountain House, a distance of about 150 miles, the Saskatchewan is not navigable. From Mountain House to Edmonton, about 150 miles, it is navigable for barges, and from Edmonton to Carlton House, about 500 miles, for steamers during a couple of months; some years for a longer period. Between Carlton and Lake Winnipeg the river is very well fitted for navigation, except for 20 miles between Cedar Lake and Lake Winnipeg, and about the same distance in Coal Rapids, near the junction of the southern branch, about 50 miles below Carlton. Total length of the Saskatchewan about 1,200 miles. The southern branch of the Saskatchewan has three main sources all flowing from the Rocky Mountains, viz.: Gros Ventres, Bow and Red Deer Rivers. From the south bank of this great river northwest to Peace River, the climate is adapted to the growth of wheat. Coal, salt, iron, gold and bitumen are among the products to be found. For hundreds of miles wild cattle can be seen grazing in countless herds. The valley of the Saskatchewan is fitted to sustain as dense an agricultural population as any area of equal extent on the face of the globe. This valley is supposed to be peopled by 17,000 Indians. Saskatchewan is an abbreviation of the Cree word "Kisiskatchewan" (rapid stream).

SASKATCHEWAN DISTRICT, lying to the east of the Province of the same name, and not included (Sept. 1, 1905) in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. Area, 21,122 square miles, of which 2,335 square miles are water.

SASKATCHEWAN LANDING, a post settlement on the South Saskatchewan River, in the Prov. of Saskatchewan (formerly Assa. West, N.W.T.), 30 miles north of Swift Current Station, on the main line of the C.P.R., between Moose Jaw and Medicine Hat. There is 1 general store, and 1 hotel. Pop., under 100; scattered along the river.

SASKATOON, a growing town in the Prov. of Saskatchewan, on the Saskatchewan River, 160 miles from Regina, the provincial capital 90 miles from Prince Albert. It is an important station of the Canadian Northern Ry. (Regina & Prince Albert branch), and the C.P.R. are building a line to Prince Albert and beyond, which will pass through it; also the Grand Trunk Pacific Ry. will have a station here. It is in the centre of the hard wheat belt, and, as Earl Grey says, "in the centre of the British Empire." It contains churches of six denominations, good schools, 7 hotels, 6 branch banks, a number of stores, and 2 printing offices issuing one daily and 1 tri-weekly newspaper. A bridge is being erected by the Province over the Saskatchewan River. The place is very progressive, and is destined to become one of the most important in the West.

SASSEGANIGON, or SASOYINAGA, a lake and river in Pontiac co., Que.

SATTERTHWAITE, Simcoe co., Ont. See Foxmead, a post village and station on the G.T.R. (Midland branch), 11 miles north of Orillia.

SATURNA, a post settlement in Nanaimo dist., B.C. Chemainus, on the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Ry., is the nearest railway station.

SAUBLE, a river of Bruce co., Ontario, discharging into Lake Huron, about 12 miles north of Southampton. It is celebrated as having good lake trout fishing, and for the number of mill privileges on its course. About 2 miles from Lake Huron there is a fall of about 16 feet, creating a large amount of water-power.

SAUBLE FALLS, a post village in Bruce co., Ont., at the junction of the Sauble and Rankin Rivers, 12 miles from Wiarton, on the G.T.R. (Owen Sound & Park Head Jct.), 10 miles north of Park Head Jct. It contains 2 churches (Methodist and Baptist), 1 school and 1 saw mill. It is 20 miles from Port Elgin (Hamilton & Southampton branch of the G.T.R.), 4 miles south of Southampton, on Lake Huron. Pop. 100.

SAUGEEN, Bruce co., Ont. See Southampton, on Lake Huron.

SAUGEEN, or GHEGHELO, or FISHING ISLANDS, a group of islands on the eastern (Ontario) side of Lake Huron, about 18 miles from Southampton, the northern terminus of the W.G. & B.R., extending for about 7 miles, and varying in distance from 2 to 5 miles from the main shore. They are celebrated for the large quantities of white fish and herring that are caught in the fall of the year, and form safe and commodious harbors for large vessels.

SAUGEEN, a river of Ontario, in Bruce co., discharging into Lake Huron at the village of Southampton, after a course of about 150 miles through an exceedingly fertile and well settled country. It is 150 yards wide at its mouth. From its source to the Lake there are numerous rapids, creating a large amount of water-power, only a portion of which is used. Sturgeon, bass and pickerel are taken in the Saugeen, and large quantities of trout in its tributaries. Some years ago a large number of salmon fry were put into its head waters as an experiment. It is visited every season by American and other pleasure seekers for angling.

SAULNIERVILLE, a post village in Digby co., N.S., on St. Mary's Bay, with station of its name (2½ miles distant) on the Dominion Atlantic Ry., 34 miles south-west of Digby, and 33 miles north-east of Yarmouth. It has 1 Roman Catholic church, 2 general and 1 furniture stores, 1 hotel and 1 factory. Pop., about 500.

SUPERIOR, LAKE, the most westerly and most elevated of the North American chain of lakes, and the largest expanse of fresh water on the globe. It extends from lat. 46° 35′ to 49° N., and from lon. 84° 30′ to 92° 20′ W. It has Minnesota on the west and northwest, Wisconsin and the northern peninsula of Michigan on the southern, and the districts of Algoma and Thunder Bay in Northern Ontario on the north. Length, 390 miles; breadth, 160 miles; circuit, about 1,750 miles; area, 31,420 sq. miles. Height above sea level, 602¾ feet; depth varying from 80 to 200 fathoms. It is of very irregular shape, widening towards its centre, and gradually narrowing, partly towards its eastern, but much more so towards its western extremity, thus forming an irregular crescent, with its convexity on the north and its concavity on the south. The north shore is generally bold and elevated, and extends about 12 miles, presenting almost continuous ranges of cliffs, which vary in height from 300 to 1,500 feet; the south shore is low and sandy, though occasionally interrupted by limestone ridges, the most remarkable of which, situated towards the eastern extremity, presents a perpendicular wall 300 feet high, broken by numerous caverns and projections, and forming, under the name of the Pictured Rocks, one of the greatest natural curiosities in America. The central portion of the lake is clear of islands, which, however, are numerous both towards the south and the north side. In the former direction they are generally small; but in the latter, several, more especially the Isle Royal, are of considerable dimensions, and along with the indentation of the coast, afford good shelter for vessels. The water of the lake is remarkable for its transparency, and derives its supplies from a basin estimated at 100,000 square miles, which is drained by more than 200 streams. About 30 of these are of considerable size, but they are almost all impetuous torrents, interrupted by rocks and rapids. The outlet is at the south-east by the St. Mary's Strait, which communicates with Lake Huron and the other great lakes, whose waters reach the ocean through the St. Lawrence. St. Mary's Strait (Sault Ste. Marie) descends 22 feet in a distance of ¾ of a mile, forming a series of rapids, around which a navigable canal has been constructed, forming the last link of the chain of communication between the great lakes, and adding above 1,700 miles to our coast trade. Within the lake itself the only obstructions to its navigation are the violent rapids to which it is subject. It is well supplied with fish, principally trout, whitefish and sturgeon. The two former are of excellent quality, and have led to the establishment of a number of fishing stations. The principal exports by the lake are coal, wheat, flour, iron ore and copper, of which last, veins of great richness and extent have been discovered both on its shores and islands. The silver mines of Lake Superior are very rich. Successful and most profitable explorations are being prosecuted on a number of islands and on the mainland by several companies. The most valuable deposits yet found have been on Silver Islet. The boundary line between Canada and the United States, in Lake Superior, proceeds through its centre, till it approaches Isle Royal, when it bends north, so as to give that island entirely to the United States, and is then carried south-south-west to its termination at the mouth of Pigeon River, in lat. 48° N., striking up through the old voyageur route to the north-west as far as Lake of the Woods.

SUSPENSION BRIDGE, a bridge that has been thrown across the Niagara River, 2 miles below the great cataract, to connect the Grand Trunk Railway with the railway system of the State of New York. The bridge is a single span of 800 feet in length, raised 230 feet above the water, and supported by 4 wire cables 9¼ inches in diameter, with an ultimate capacity of sustaining 10,000 tons. There are two floors, the upper for the railroad track and the lower for waggons. The eastern end of the bridge commands a fine view of the falls, and of the rapids under and below the bridge, for ¾ of a mile, to the whirlpool. The water of these rapids runs at the rate of 25 miles per hour, with breakers dashing from 10 to 20 feet in height. Viewed from the shore they present one of the grandest sights of the kind in the world, and the tourist has not done justice to Niagara until he has stood on the shore 150 rods below the bridge.

TADOUSAC, a post village and watering place, the capital of Saguenay co., Que., founded in 1599, by Chauvin, at the east entrance of the Saguenay River, about 5 miles above its confluence with the St. Lawrence, on a semi-circular terrace at the top of a beautiful bay with a sandy beach, hemmed in by mountains of solid rock, 25 miles across the St. Lawrence from Rivière du Loup, 130 miles from Quebec. It has a good hotel and a number of handsome villas, including one built by his Excellency, Earl Dufferin, a former Governor-General of Canada, and is much frequented by tourists and health-seekers during the summer months. Tadousac, apart from its pleasant situation as a watering-place, is interesting from the circumstance of its having been at an early period the capital of the French settlements, and for a long time one of the chief fur-trading posts, as well as the roadstead of French vessels, which anchored here and sent their imports by small boats to Quebec. In 1648, the fur trade of the post gave profits of 40,000 livres on 250,000 livres worth of fur. It is confidently asserted that here once stood the first stone and mortar building ever erected on the continent of America—the home of Father Marquette, who subsequently explored the waters of the Mississippi. The oldest church in Canada is still standing here, and is visited by every tourist who comes to the place. It was built in 1747. Charlevoix, in 1720, thus speaks of it: "Most of our geographers have placed a town here, where there never was but one French house and some huts of savages, who resorted hither annually to trade with the French when the navigation was free; the missionaries made use of the opportunity, and when, the trade was over, the merchants returned to their homes, the savages to their forests, and the Gospel laborers followed the last." Tadousac contains 2 churches, 4 stores, and 3 hotels. Salmon and other fish are plentiful in the waters here. Pop. (1901), 511.

TOBIQUE, a river in New Brunswick, a large tributary of the St. John, falling from the north-east into the main stream, about 50 miles above Woodstock. It has its source in the highlands constituting the watershed between the St. John River and the Gulf of St. Lawrence. One of its main branches, called the Little Tobique, with a general south-easterly course, connects by a short portage with the Nepisiquit, flowing through Northumberland and Gloucester counties into the Baie des Chaleurs. From another direction, through a very rugged and mountainous country, a branch falls into the main stream at the same point. This branch is divided into two, and forms the Campbell and Serpentine Rivers. These streams form a junction 10 miles from the main forks, from which the Tobique flows through a rich and fertile valley in a south-westerly direction to join the St. John, a distance of 62 miles. For about two miles from its discharge it flows with great rapidity through a deep rocky gorge. There are said to be gold-bearing rocks and auriferous pebbles on the Campbell and Serpentine Rivers. The banks of the Tobique are heavily wooded with red pine, and it presents some of the most picturesque scenery in the province. It abounds with salmon and trout of the largest size, and is much frequented by the disciples of Izaak Walton.

TORMORE, a post settlement in York co., Ont., 2½ miles from Kleinburg, on the C.P.R. (Toronto, Orangeville & Owen Sound branch).

TORONTO, capital and distributing centre of Ontario, and one of the most flourishing cities in the Dominion, is situated on a beautiful circular bay, on the north-west shore of Lake Ontario, in York co., 333 miles west-south-west of Montreal, 161 miles from Kingston, 39 miles north by east of Hamilton, and 500 miles north-west of Washington. Lat. 43° 39′ N., lon. 79° 23′ W. Mean temperature of the year 44°4; winter 24°6; summer 64°1 Fahrenheit. Its population (1907) is about 275,000.

The bay is entered from the west by a narrow channel, and is separated from the lake by a low peninsula about 6 miles long, enclosing a beautiful basin 1½ miles in diameter, forming a safe and well-sheltered harbor, capable of containing a large number of vessels. The peninsula, many years ago now, had been cut in two by the action of the waters of the bay and lake, the western portion now forming an island which has become a favorite resort of the citizens during the summer months. A commodious hostelry is now built on the island, with many summer residences, a number of steam ferries connecting these with the city. Gibraltar Point is the name given to the south-west angle of the island, on which there is an excellent lighthouse, and near by the filtering basin, from which the city is supplied with its drinking water from the lake.

The site of the city, which extends about 8 miles along the lake, and covers an area of 17 square miles, is low, but rises gently from the water's edge—the observatory being 108 feet above the Lake. The streets, 265 miles in extent, generally cross each other at right angles, most of them running parallel with the bay, and intersected by others which have a north and south direction, inclining slightly to the west, the whole forming nearly a parallelogram.

The principal streets running east and west in the denser portions of the city are Front, Wellington, King, Adelaide, Richmond and Queen streets; and of the cross streets, Jarvis, Church, Yonge, Bay, York and Simcoe streets. King, Queen, and Yonge streets are the thoroughfares, and contain the largest number of retail stores, Front and Wellington streets being occupied by the wholesale houses.

The city generally is built of a light colored brick, of a soft, pleasing tint, though, of recent years, many handsome edifices have been erected of stone, with elaborate cuttings and rich ornamentation. This improved architecture is particularly noticeable since the great fire of April 19, 1904, which destroyed much of the down town business section.

The city government is vested in a Council consisting of a mayor, an executive board of control of 4 members, and a body of aldermen, 18 in number. For protection from fire it has an efficient fire brigade, 235 officers and men strong, and for police protection it has a force of 360 officers and men, with all adequate appliances and fire and police stations. There are also commodious armories maintained by the Dominion Government for the use of the active resident militia, besides schools of cavalry and infantry, which provide military instruction. Stationed at Toronto, at Stanley Barracks, there is a Government military force of dragoons and infantry, in addition to the militia regiments, the Queen's Own Rifles, 10th Royal Grenadiers, 48th Highlanders, the total strength of which is 32 companies, besides 4 squads each of the Toronto Light Horse and Governor General's Body Guard, the Canadian Engineers, Army and Medical Corps and the U. C. College Cadets.

Toronto rejoices in the number and beauty of her public parks, covering a total area of 1700 acres, the chief of which are High Park (375 acres), Exhibition Park (204 acres), Riverdale Park, with fine Zoo attached (162 acres), Queen's Park (35 acres), Island Park (389 acres), Simcoe Park (150 acres), Woodbine Park (50 acres), Bellwood's Park (15 acres), Stanley Park (14 acres), Allan Gardens (10½ acres), Ramsden Park (17 acres), Dovercourt Park (7½ acres), and Alexander Park (7 acres).

The public buildings of the city are substantial in workmanship, and of beautiful architectural design. Many of the stores, especially the wholesale ones, and private dwellings, are quite palatial in their outward aspect and interior structure. Toronto is the seat of Law and Provincial Government, and the headquarters of the Educational Department of Ontario. Osgoode Hall is a fine classic structure, containing all the Superior Law Courts of the Province. The old Parliament buildings, of poor exterior, have given place in Queen's Park to a structure in keeping with the wealth and importance of the Province, with handsomely decorated and furnished legislative chamber, and well-equipped executive and other offices; the Normal School buildings, of Italian design, contain offices of the Bureau of Education, a Normal and Model School and educational museum. There are 57 elegant, commodious and well-equipped public school buildings, and three edifices (Collegiate institutes) devoted to High School instruction, together with a Provincial Normal School, Schools of Art, etc. In connection with higher education there is the University of Toronto, one of the finest buildings on the continent of America, and reckoned second to none on this side of the Atlantic as a seat of learning. Affiliated with Toronto University are a number of federated colleges and faculties, besides its own enrolment of staff and over 4,000 students. It is of Norman architecture in its principal features, with massive tower and richly sculptured doorway for its main entrance. It is beautifully situated at the western side of the Queen's Park, a fine sylvan retreat for the recreation of the citizens, approached by spacious avenues ornamented with rows of stately trees. In other portions of the park are various other institutions., and at a short distance from the University there is a monument erected in honour of those Toronto Volunteers who sacrificed their lives in defence of their country during the first attempted invasion of Canada by the Fenian miscreants (1866). Trinity University, at the west end of Queen Street, is another educational institution in connection with the Episcopalian Church; and there is also Knox College at the head of Spadina avenue, for the theological training of students in connection with the Canada Presbyterian Church. The other educational and professional institutions of the city embrace St. Margaret's College, Moulton College, Havergal College, St. Andrew's Colleges, and Bishop Strachan School, known as Wykeham Hall. There are also McMaster (Baptist) University, Victoria (Methodist) University, and St. Michael's (R. C.) College. The Upper Canada College is an extensive range of buildings in the northern part of the city, and is used as a grammar school and residential school for boys. There are two schools of medicine in Toronto, each having an efficient staff of professors, besides a School of Practical Science, a Technical High School, a Medical College for Women, 2 Colleges of Music, several Collegiate Institutes, and two Business and Correspondence Colleges. There are also an ably conducted Veterinary College, General Hospital, Colleges of Dentistry and 1 College of Pharmacy.

Toronto, of recent years, has achieved distinction as an art and musical centre, in addition to what it has done and is doing in the fields of primary, secondary and higher education. Besides its art galleries, local and provincial, it has a number of art leagues, schools of art and societies for the encouragement of music and art, together with a Provincial Normal School and a large and thoroughly equipped series of public schools.

The public institutions are numerous, and many of the buildings appropriated for their purposes have striking features of architectural beauty. Amongst these may be enumerated the Custom House, the Post Office, the Union Station, the Central Prison, the Mercer Reformatory, the Lunatic Asylum, the Exhibition Buildings, for holding the Provincial Agricultural Exhibitions, the Boys' Home, the Girls' Home, the House of Providence, the Protestant Orphans' Home, the Home for Incurables, besides the hotels (including the new King Edward); banks (one of the finest structures being the Traders Bank building), and opera houses, erected by private enterprise.

The manufacturing interests of Toronto are varied. There are several extensive iron foundries and engineering establishments, railway car building shops, rolling mills, several breweries and a mammoth distillery, carriage factories, tanneries, soap works, spice mills, cabinet factories, one of which is the largest in the Dominion, car wheel works, machine shops of all kinds, pork-packing establishments—one of these in appliances and arrangements for killing and curing being modelled after the best Chicago houses—sewing machines, sash and door, and boot and shoe factories on an extensive scale. Besides these, many other varieties of manufacture and trade are carried on.

The value of the output of the city's manufactures, it is estimated, now approximates 75 million dollars annually; while it is calculated that $70,000,000 of capital is to-day invested in Toronto's manufacturing industries.

Banking is well represented, there being 23 banks in the city, 13 of which have sprung out of the enterprise of Toronto merchants, and are doing a profitable business. These are the Bank of Toronto, the Imperial Bank, the Bank of Commerce, the Dominion Bank, the Standard Bank, the Traders' Bank, the Crown, the Sovereign, Metropolitan, Home, Sterling, United Empire and Farmers' Banks. The other 10 have their head offices elsewhere, and are branches' of the Bank of Montreal, the Merchants' Bank, the Bank of British North America, the Quebec Bank, Molsons Bank, Union Bank, Bank of Hamilton, the Bank of Ottawa, Royal Bank, and Bank of Nova Scotia.

Insurance offices and building and loan associations are numerous and their business is extensive.

The principal public halls are the St. Lawrence, Albert, Agricultural and Music Hall, with several minor ones, and a large one, Shaftesbury Hall, with a suite of rooms attached for the Young Men's Christian Association. There is also a Mechanics' Institute, with class rooms, reading room and library. There are 5 theatres, the Grand and the Royal Opera House, and 3 others, besides a number of concert halls, chief among them being Massey Hall, having a seating capacity of about 3,500. The Canadian Institute has a building of its own with a museum and library.

Toronto contains 3 synagogues and about 200 churches, of which 46 are Episcopal, 13 Roman Catholic, 44 Methodist, 36 Presbyterian, 18 Baptist, 14 Congregationalist, 2 Reformed Episcopal, 1 Unitarian, 1 Catholic Apostolic, 2 New Jerusalem, and 12 miscellaneous churches. Among the churches most deserving of notice for their architectural merits are St. James' Cathedral (Church of England), St. Michael's Cathedral (Roman Catholic), St. Andrew's (Presbyterian), St. James' Square (Presbyterian), Jarvis Street (Baptist), Bond Street (Congregational), and Church of the Ascension (Episcopal).

There are in the vicinity of the city 4 burying grounds, being Mount Pleasant, containing 16 acres; the Toronto Necropolis, with 15 acres; St. James' Cemetery, with 65 acres—the latter 2 at the north-east extremity of the city, and the former north of Yonge Street and the Roman Catholic Cemetery in Power Street. The public parks, large and small, now number 8; comprising in all a total of close upon 1700 acres.

One of the attractions of the city is the beautiful Athletic Club House, standing on College Street, right in the centre of the city, upon 1½ acres of lawns laid out for bowling and tennis, and with a bicycle track. The club has nearly 1,000 members. It is 6 stories high, and, besides a swimming bath 80 by 24 feet, and bowling alleys, it has billiard, smoking and card rooms, a dining room capable of seating 400 members, fencing and boxing rooms and a gymnasium 92 by 86 feet, and 30 feet high. The Toronto Bicycle Club and the Toronto Fencing Club both have their own quarters in this building, and are large flourishing corporations.

There are besides, 3 Club Houses, having elegant buildings and handsomely furnished suites of rooms. There are the Toronto Club, on York Street; the United Empire Club, on King Street; and the National Club, on Bay Street. The Royal Canadian Yacht Club have a boat house and dining saloons on one of the wharves. Besides the Royal Canadian yacht club, the Argonaut Boating Club, the Toronto Rowing Club, the Toronto Canoe Club, there are many other organizations in the interest of all kinds of healthy sport. The Masonic, Temperance and National Societies have each their lodge rooms and places of assembly.

Over 165 newspapers and periodicals are published in Toronto, viz.: 6 daily, 49 weekly, 20 semi-monthly, 76 monthly, 8 quarterly and 10 annually.

The city is well supplied with water and is lighted with gas and electric light, and has an efficient fire and police brigade. Electric car service on the streets of the city and to the suburbs is now very general and most efficient.

Its fine harbor affords great facilities for an extensive traffic. Lines of steamers run daily during navigation to all the lake ports and ports on the River St. Lawrence.

Toronto returns 4 members to the Provincial Legislature and 5 to the Dominion House of Commons.

Several lines of railway run through the city —the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Rys. These railways connect at all seasons of the year with all places of importance on the continent. The Canadian Northern Ontario Ry. has recently opened a line to Parry Sound, and contemplates a number of other branches.

The value of real and personal property in Toronto for the years 1870, 1871, 1872, 1894 and 1906 was respectively, 1870, $26,918,157; 1871, $29,277,185; 1872, $32,644,612; 1894, $150,833,796; 1906, $250,000,000. The imports annually of the city now approach $60,000,000. The value of the city assessment was in 1906, $169,195,316.

Pop. in 1817, 1,200; in 1830, 1,677; in 1842, 15,336; in 1845, 19,706; in 1852, 50,763; in 1861, 44,821; in 1871, 56,092; in 1881, 96,156; in 1891, 181,220 and in 1901, 208,040. The population of the city to-day (1906), including its suburbs, is not far short, it is estimated, of 300,000. The annual value of the city's imports now exceed 50 million dollars, and its assessment for the year 1908 totalled $236,391,139. Its yearly expenditure at the present time exceeds 4 million dollars. Other enterprising features of Toronto's progress in recent times include the practical aid it is now giving towards the furnishing of cheap electric power for lighting and industrial purposes.

Toronto was founded by Governor Simcoe in 1794. Parliament buildings were erected and the Legislature assembled there for the first time in 1797. It 1813, it was captured by the Americans, under General Pike, who was killed in storming the fort, but it was held only for a few days. Since that period the place has made steady progress, and has assumed high importance as a mart of trade and commerce. In 1834 it was incorporated a city, and its name changed from York to Toronto. With the utilization of the Falls of Niagara for water-power purposes, the opening up of the Temiskaming region in Northern Ontario, and the extended facilities for reaching the Canadian Far West by the Grand Trunk Pacific RR., the trade future of Toronto is vastly increased. The Customs duties collected at the port for 1906 were $10,009,290.63, while the revenue of the Toronto Post Office for the same year was $1,050,913; indicating, in a marked degree, the increasing growth of the city's trade. The bank clearing house transactions for the same year amounted to a total of $1,219,125,334.

VANCOUVER.—This progressive city is situated at the western terminus of the C.P.R. 15 miles north of the mouth of the Fraser River, in the Strait of Georgia. The principal part of the city occupies a peninsula, bounded on the north by the waters of Burrard Inlet, south by a small indentation called False Creek, and west by English Bay, of which the other two are arms. The city is extending to the east, and to the south across False Creek.

The site of Vancouver could scarcely have been better chosen for a large city. Burrard Inlet is always safely navigable for the deepest draft vessels, and is one of the finest harbors in the world. The passage at the narrows or mouth of the inlet is about half a mile wide. Opposite the city front, however, it is more than 2 miles wide, with a depth varying from 6 to 20 fathoms, and extends inland about 20 miles, affording access to a considerable area of rich country, the products of which Vancouver governs, in this respect serving the commercial purpose of a large river. On the west and south, English Bay and False Creek also afford accommodation for shipping.

It was incorporated under the name "Vancouver" on April 6, 1886, the population then being about 600. The name is in honor of Capt. Geo. Vancouver, R.N., who, over a hundred years ago, discovered, explored and named Burrard Inlet.

Twenty years ago, nine-tenths of the present area of the city was a dense unbroken forest of high firs, with but a single street and a few rough logging roads leading into the forest; one of these in the direction of New Westminster. While the timber was being removed from the site and Vancouver was in process of being transformed from a wilderness to a first-class modern city, a fire swept over it (June 13, 1886), and left but a few buildings standing. Phœnix-like it has since sprung from its own ashes, for on the completion in May, 1887, of the C.P.R. into Vancouver, and the arrival of the first through train from Montreal, an impetus was given the growth of the city, and the advancement made has been marvellous.

The climate is temperate, the thermometer seldom registering above 90° in the summer, and lower than 10° in winter. The rainy season may be considered from November till March. The driest months in the year are June, July, August and September.

The city is laid out on a magnificent scale, and is being built up in a style fully in accordance with the plan. Nearly all the streets are graded, the more important business ones being planked and macadamized. Electric street cars are in operation, and the streets are well lighted with electric arc lights.

The several churches are represented as follows: Episcopalian, 6; Roman Catholic, 2; Presbyterian, 6; Methodist, 5; Baptist, 4; Congregational, 2; Lutheran, 1, besides a Y. M. C. A. building, the barracks of the Salvation Army, and Chinese Mission. It has 3 daily papers: the "News Advertiser" (morning), the "World" (evening), and "Province" (evening), besides weekly and monthly periodicals. It has also 12 banks, agencies of the chief eastern monetary institutions.

The banking returns of the city, as indicated at the Vancouver Clearing House for the year ending February 28, 1906, amounted to a total of $92,548,818, an increase over the total of the previous year of close upon 17 million dollars. The custom returns of the port for the year 1905 show a revenue derived from imports of $1,652,582, while the appraised value of the city's exports amounted to $6,052,200. In the following year, ending March 31, 1906, the value of the exports increased nearly 1½ millions: this, of course, is in addition to the value of the year's exports of the neighboring City of New Westminster, amounting to nearly $5,000,000. The bulk of these exports were, it is understood, to the United States, and consisted of timber, fish, minerals (including coal and the precious metals), building stone, and agricultural products and fruit. It has a good school system, with 115 teachers and 5,678 pupils, the cost of which, covering the 12 schools in the city, was, for the year 1905, $170,562. It is also well equipped with hospitals, water works, fire halls, a police force, and a free public library. The value in 1905 of the city property was, in buildings $547,040, and in lands $608,550. Added to these figures are the value of its waterworks, fire halls, sewers, drains, septic tanks, and other civic property, bringing up the total to over 4 million dollars. Vancouver's shipping industries keep pace with its general expansion: though manufacturing is as yet not a strong feature, its lumber mills, coast and interior mining, deep sea fishing, keep the docks and shipping activities active. For extending the area of the docks and for manufacturing purposes, the city has recently obtained from the Dominion Government rights over 500 acres of tidal flats at the east end of False Creek. The harbor is always interesting with its array of steamers and shipping plying between Vancouver and its coast and foreign ports. Among the former will be found the steamships of the Canadian Pacific Royal Mail and Steamship Company, plying in connection with its transcontinental railway service to China and Japan and to the provincial ports on the coast. These are in addition to the fleet of other steamship lines in the Australian trade, as well as those plying between Vancouver and Victoria, between the former and Montreal, and those of the Northern Express service to and from Skagway and the water approaches to the Yukon.

For recreation purposes, Vancouver is moreover supplying itself well with a system of public parks, in addition to the delights afforded by pleasure boats on Burrard Inlet and in the waterways adjacent to the city.

Stanley Park, a peninsula of 950 acres, almost surrounded by water, is encircled by a beautiful 10 mile driving road and intersected by drives and walks. East End Park contains 160 acres granted by the Local Government. The city has also 40 acres of land on the south side of False Creek reserved for park purposes.

The increasing population of Vancouver further emphasizes the city's progress. In January, 1887, its population was only about 2,000; in 1891, it rose to 13,709; in 1901 it had reached 26,196; and to-day (1906) it is not far short of 46,000.

VANCOUVER ISLAND, B.C., not the least important portion of British Columbia is Vancouver Island, which, from its great wealth of natural resources and its commanding position on the Pacific Coast, should become one of the richest and most prosperous districts of the province. Coal mining and lumbering are the chief industries, and fishing, quartz mining, copper smelting, shipbuilding, whaling and other branches are being rapidly developed, the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway, running from Victoria to Wellington, serves a section of country which it would be difficult to surpass anywhere in the world for beauty of scenery and natural wealth. There are prosperous agricultural communities along the railway and in Comox District, and several mines are being developed. There is quite a large area of agricultural land, but it is heavily timbered and costly to clear by individual effort. Area, 10 million acres.

VICTORIA, the capital of British Columbia and the seat of the Provincial Government, is one of the beautiful cities of the Pacific Coast, and is situated in the south-east part of Vancouver Island, about an irregular indenture from the Strait of Juan de Fuca on the south. The city is built on moderately undulating ground, and contains an area of about 5 square miles. The nearest mainland is about 20 miles distant south to Port Angeles, Wash. The nearest Canadian mainland is about 65 miles north-westward by the main route of travel. Vancouver is 84 miles, Seattle 80 miles, San Francisco 750 miles, and Tacoma 127 miles. Vancouver Island extends some 40 miles farther south than the 49th parallel, so Victoria faces United States Territory to the south and east.

The Hudson Bay Company established a trading post at Victoria early in the last century. In 1847 a fort was built there. Five years later the town was platted, and in 1862 it was incorporated. The first vessel arrived from England in 1845. For many years the Hudson Bay Company practically owned the entire Vancouver Island, and whatever industrial operations were engaged in were related in some manner to the company's interests. This condition of affairs prevailed to a considerable extent till about the year 1858, when the Fraser River gold excitement drew throngs of miners to British Columbia. In a few months afterwards Victoria developed into a flourishing city, though but few of the twenty-five or thirty thousand miners who spent the winter in that vicinity remained as permanent residents. Still its real growth began at that time, and it has had a gradual and healthy increase since

The population of the city has been increasing steadily. In 1874 there was a population of 4,674; in 1891, 16,841; in 1901, 20,821; to-day (1906) the population is estimated at 26,000.

The city's mercantile, manufacturing and shipping interests have been developed by the support which it commanded as one of the two chief trading points of the Province. Victoria has shared with Vancouver in being the chief trading point of the entire British possessions west of the Rocky Mountains, because it was so accessible by water, which was the great highway for all commerce.

Until the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Victoria was the only place of importance in British Columbia. It is the ocean gateway to the Province, and must ever command and receive a large portion of the interior and coast trade.

It is, with Vancouver, the commercial metropolis and social centre. Shipping from all parts of the world enters the harbor, making it a notable port of the Pacific seaboard.

Victoria is increasing in size and importance from the force of its own momentum. The larger it grows the more rapid is its advancement. No limit is hazarded to the scope for industrial development on the island, which is three hundred miles in length north-west and south-east—an area of about twelve thousand miles—which territory may be considered tributary to Victoria. From this area, and from the smaller islands of the adjoining waters and from the mainland much business flows to the capital city. The government is administered here, and if no other reason existed, that alone would have a tendency to draw business. The Parliament buildings are admitted to be a great adornment of the city, to which has now to be included the palatial hostelry erected by the Canadian Pacific Ry. Company. The Victoria Custom House shows the largest business of any port of the Province, and ranks with Vancouver as fifth port of the Dominion.

There is a Gas Works, also an Electric Light Company, which furnishes the "Ball Electric Arc Light," as well as incandescent light, which is extensively used among the business houses. An efficient paid fire department, with the latest improved equipment, gives ample fire protection.

Beacon Hill Park, in the vicinity, is the favorite resort of the citizens. It occupies a large tract of ground in the eastern side of the city, being washed by the waters of the Straits of Juan de Fuca. A slight elevation, around which is a race track, gives the park its name. The park itself is a rare combination of the beauties of nature and artistic design. Three artificial lakes have been excavated, into the smaller one of which goldfish have been placed. A number of wild animals and birds are in cages or enclosures. Good roads and foot paths enable visitors to go comfortably all over the park. This is a great field for all kinds of athletic games, and a favorite one with tourists, especially as the outlook from it is grand, overlooking the broad strait, with the snow-capped Olympian Mountains plainly in view, on the mainland of Washington to the south, and the majestic peaks of the Cascades relieving the landscape to the south-east and east. From the higher points of the city can be enjoyed perhaps the finest landscape views of mountain, water and islands that are to be seen in any part of the world.

The North Arm of the Harbor, which forms a gorge about a mile from the city, is another favorite resort, especially for boating parties.

Esquimalt is also one of the prominent resorts of the vicinity, the Government works and naval equipments adding to the attractions which the scenery affords.

Esquimalt (virtually a part of Victoria) is esteemed of such importance by the British Government (by whom, until recently, this station was maintained), that they erected strong fortifications in addition to the former means of defence. This defence is now undertaken by the Canadian Dominion.

Though located on an island, Victoria does not suffer from the lack of outside communication, as that fact might imply. The harbor is generally a lively place, especially during the summer season, for then the ships that bear the carrying trade between here and England generally arrive with large cargoes of merchandise of all kinds, for general distribution in the Province, and by them are returned those cargoes of salmon, lumber and furs, the principal exports of the Province, and for which it is noted. The Pacific Coast Steamship Co.'s boats call at Victoria direct from San Francisco, distant 750 miles, every five days, carrying the Canadian and United States mails. During the fruit season these ships bring the first supply for the Province of Victoria, and from here it is distributed. A C.P.N. Co. steamer makes tri-weekly coasting trips to New Westminster, and another monthly steamer for all points up the Northern Coast. The Alaskan steamers of the P. C. SS. Co. make Victoria their clearing port northbound, and entry port southbound.

Esquimalt Harbor, about three miles to the westward of Victoria, is the Dominion naval station on the Pacific. It is probably the best one on the shores of Vancouver Island. It being a perfectly land-locked refuge, and naturally easy of access for vessels of the deepest draught, war vessels are stationed there frequently, and until recent years it was the general headquaters for the imperial navy in the Pacific. A dry dock 450 feet long and 27 feet deep, with an entrance 55 feet wide, has been constructed at a cost of about $900,000. The arsenal used to contain large quantities of stores and ordnance supplies of all descriptions. The Royal Naval Hospital and Cemetery are located here.

The city is amply provided with educational facilities, both public and private. There are 5 Ward schools, besides the large central and high schools. These public schools are maintained by the Government and controlled by a school board elected by popular suffrage. There is also 1 ladies' college (Anglican) and the large St. Ann's convent, besides 2 primary schools, maintained by churches.

The city has a free public library of about fifteen thousand volumes.

There are 15 churches (3 Episcopal, 1 Roman Catholic, 3 Methodist, 3 Presbyterian, 2 Baptist, 1 Reformed Episcopal, 1 Jewish Synagogue and 1 Chinese Joss House.

The Royal Jubilee Hospital, built in the outskirts of the city, cost $100,000. There is also the St. Joseph's Hospital, a private Roman Catholic institution. The press is represented by 2 dailies ("Colonist" and "Times"), also by 4 weekly newspapers and 4 monthlies. It has also 7 banking institutions (the agencies of the B. N. America, Montreal, Commerce, Royal, Imperial, Merchants and Northern). The volume of the bank clearances of the city, for 1905, totalled $36,890,464. In 1904, the value of its exports was $2,062,794 and that of its imports $2,882,000. The vessels entered and cleared during the year were 2,263 and 2,273 respectively; of these 1,185 were foreign. Victoria is the first port of call for the trans-Pacific liners and northern steamers, as well as for all the big freighters that round the Horn for Puget Sound points. It is the home port of the Victoria sealing fleet, the C.P.R. Pacific Coast Service, and of many coasting vessels. It has daily communication with Vancouver, Seattle and other points, and there is a triweekly service to San Francisco.

The Esquimalt & Nanaimo Ry., now owned and controlled by the C.P.R., is the only road having a track into the city. Construction was begun in October, 1884, and the road was completed in August, 1886. This line extends up the Eastern Coast of the Island, a distance of some 70 miles to the City of Nanaimo, or rather to Wellington. The first 25 miles from Victoria, the road is built through a rough country, and an elevation of nearly 1,000 feet is attained. There are several high trestles and a tunnel on this section. Lake, river, valley and mountain furnish an attractive variety of scenery. A number of prosperous settlements are on the line of this road, and several resorts that are much frequented by tourists and sportsmen. Victoria is a metropolitan city, and betrays it to the eye of the least practical observer. Its position is such that it will always be the distributing point for a vast area of territory, and its numerous banking corporations have given it a prestige as a financial centre.

WINNIPEG, an important trading centre and the rapidly growing capital of the province of Manitoba, situated at the junction of the Assiniboine and Red Rivers, 40 miles south of Lake Winnipeg, 65 miles from St. Vincent, 1,424 miles from Montreal via Canadian Pacific Ry., or 1,843 miles via Chicago and St. Paul. Prior to 1870 Winnipeg was nothing more than a chief trading post of the Hudson Bay Company, whose headquarters have been and are still at Fort Garry. At that date the population was estimated at 300 souls. The growth of the city since has been marvellous, and a source of astonishment to citizens as well as strangers. In the interim Manitoba was constituted a Province of the Dominion confederation, with Winnipeg as the Provincial capital. This gave a metropolitan character to the place, and brought the elements of political autonomy in its train, making it the headquarters of the Provincial Government, where the residence of the Lieutenant-Governor and all the public departments of the Province are located, as well as the superior courts and court house and jail. The Dominion Government, too, have made the city the headquarters for locally transacting business in Manitoba and the Northwest. The city was incorporated in November, 1873, when its population numbered only some 2,000; to-day (1907), its population exceeds 100,000. There are 19 banks in the city; all doing a good business, the Bank of Montreal, Merchants, Ottawa, British North America, d'Hochelaga, Commerce, Imperial, Dominion, Hamilton, Nova Scotia, Toronto, Traders, Royal, Northern, Eastern Townships, Home, Molsons and Union Banks, and also 1 private bank. The wholesale mercantile trade is fast rising into importance, and an enormous business has recently been developed in the Northwest.

Winnipeg, besides being the political and judicial metropolis of the Northwest, has also become the educational centre. The Provincial Board of Education holds its sittings here, and the city is also the seat of the University of Manitoba, to which is affiliated St. John's College, one of the oldest here; St. Boniface College, which has erected a magnificent building valued at $50,000; Manitoba College, a younger but also a flourishing institution; St. John's Ladies' School, valued at $12,000, and St. Mary's Academy, a handsome structure on Notre Dame street, valued at $15,000. In addition to these higher seats of learning there are the public and separate schools which are well attended. The growth of church congregations has also been very rapid. To-day there are 60 church edifices, divided as follows: 7 Baptist, 10 Episcopal, 4 Congregational, 10 Methodist, 10 Presbyterian, 3 Roman Catholic, 2 Synagogues, 4 Icelandic and 10 miscellaneous.

Indicative of the progress of the city in recent years it may be stated that besides its increase in population to the 100,000 mark, Winnipeg's city assessment annually has now reached 80 million dollars; the volume of its bank clearings, in 1906, reached $504,585,914 its customs returns amounted in the same year to $3,620,072; while its inland revenue receipts for 1906 were in amount $1,148,723. It has a grain elevator capacity of 20 million bushels, and a wheat yield in the Province and adjacent region in 1906 of 90 million bushels, besides enormous yields of oats and barley. It has, in the Can. Pacific and Can. Northern RR. lines, close upon 7,000 miles of traffic more or less tributary to Winnipeg.

The city has 3 daily, 15 weekly, 1 semi-monthly, 1 semi-weekly and 16 monthly papers and magazines. It is also the headquarters of the Western division of the C.P.R., and contains the offices and repair shops of this division. Pop. in 1891, 25,639; in 1906, 90,216.

WINNIPEG, a lake partly in Manitoba, and partly in the district of Keewatin, lies in lat. 50° and 54° N., and lon. 96° and 99° W. Length, 240 miles; breadth 55 miles; shape very irregular. The shores are low, and its waters are muddy. (In Algonquin, Winnipeg means "dirty water.") Among its affluents from the east are Beren's River and the large and beautiful Winnipeg River. Its only tributary from the south is Red River, and among its many tributaries from the west are Dauphin or Little Saskatchewan River and the Great Saskatchewan River. It has no affluent from the north. It discharges its own surplus waters northward by the Nelson River, through Play Green Lake, into Hudson Bay at Port Nelson. On its shores are several stations of the Hudson Bay Company. Area, 5,054,000 acres.

WINNIPEG, a large and beautiful river of Manitoba, rises at the heights separating the Rainy River district in the extreme north-west of the Province of Ontario from Keewatin and the Northeast Territories, and flows north-west into Lake Winnipeg. One of the sources of this river is at Savanne Portage, afterwards expanding into Lac des Milles Lacs and flowing on as River La Seine. The whole, up to Little Falls, about 65 miles, is navigable by steamers; thence to Rainy Lake, 67 miles, it can be navigated only by canoes. From the beginning of Rainy Lake to the end of Lake of the Woods, including Rainy River, which connects these two beautiful sheets of water, about 208 miles, it is navigable for steamers except at the Great Falls of St. Francis. At Rat Portage, where it receives the waters of the Lake of the Woods, it assumes its own name, and flows thence into Lake Winnipeg at Fort Alexander. This portion of the stream, for a distance of about 160 miles, has so many rapids, falls and cascades that it is navigable only for canoes and small boats. At one place the Winnipeg takes the name of White River, because the water is everywhere foaming from the rapids being very continuous. The most remarkable affluents of Winnipeg River are, on the north, Little English River, which empties Lac Seul and is the canoe route, via Albany River, to the port of that name on Hudson Bay, and on the south, the chain of lakes which was formerly the canoe route, via Grand Portage and Pigeon River. Vermillion Lake also drains into Winnipeg River.

WOLFE ISLAND, a large island at the entrance to the River St. Lawrence at the north-east extremity of Lake Ontario. It is in Frontenac co., Ont. It divides the St. Lawrence into two branches, both of which are navigable for the largest vessels. The south one, however, is the main channel and the boundary line between the United States and Canada. Wolfe Island is the Queen of the far-famed Thousand Islands. Its west portion is opposite Kingston. Its coast is rather irregular, indented with beautiful and picturesque bays, which are a great resort for tourists in the summer season. The shores are sufficiently high to prevent the surf from washing up on the land, and is composed of fine gravel and limestone rock, which gives the whole coast a cleanly and attractive appearance. Its greatest width is 7 miles and length about 21 miles, and has 30,600 acres of as good land as is to be found in the province. There are many evidences of this Island having been inhabited by Indians, as human bones and various relics peculiar to Indian life have been discovered in many places. Fifty years ago Wolfe Island was almost a dense and unbroken forest, inhabited by wolves and other wild beasts. But since that period the wild forest has given place to the most beautiful cultivated fields and orchards. There is a thriving village, 6 churches, 15 schools, 1 town hall, YUKON RIVER, the chief river of Yukon Territory and one of the largest streams on the continent. It is formed at Fort Selkirk, south of Dawson City, by the junction of the Lewes and Pelly Rivers, and further northward it receives the waters of Stewart, McQuesten and Indian Rivers, and at Dawson is joined by the Klondike, after which it proceeds north-westward into Alaska, finally emptying into the northern Pacific, a total distance of over 1,850 miles. From its many outlets (25 in number), its discharge of waters is estimated to be nearly two-thirds that of the Mississippi. In Alaska its main tributary is the Porcupine. The Yukon River is navigable for long stretches in the summer months, though on its upper waters navigation is interfered with by rapids and the swiftness of its current.
